

Better equipping new managers

Manager onboarding (orientation) has been improved to better equip new managers for their role. The manager's first 3 months is now dedicated to learning about their work environments and supports available, as well as building relationships.

Using a learner-centred approach, this experience is a shared responsibility, supporting organizational performance, accountability and engagement.

"It was great having one-on-one sessions with each of the consultants (Human Resources and corporate supports) who assist my area. I was able to put a face to a name very quickly and could ask questions which encouraged rapport development."
